Course overview
The course addresses the opportunities for sustainable design and development of products and services. The goal is to provide a clear starting point for cultivating professional practices toward sustainability. The course will focus on a range of concepts, techniques and scenario-based exercises related to sustainable design and development in professional settings. It will provide a snapshot of how to approach sustainability and its possibilities away from today's device-based practices.

Course content
The seminar consists of three full-day sessions. Each session features a topical presentation and discussion on fundamental and practical concepts and applications of sustainability. Each day of the seminar also includes a schematic workshop to develop professional narratives and/or scenarios for sustainability-oriented planning and development.

Dates
July 10 - 12, 2023 (on-site in Berlin).
